MacManus, Susan A., "Why Businesses Are Reluctant to Sell to Governments", Public Administration Review. Washington: Jul/Aug 1991.Vol.51, Iss. 4; pg. 328, 17 pgs ProQuest document ID: 708752, discloses at a time when governments are actively and aggressively seeking more opportunities to rely on the private sector, news media accounts indicate that the business community has become more cautious about selling to the government. Some believed that government officials were intentionally exclusionary, when they drew up the specs. A typical comment from one survey respondent was: "Bid specs are intentionally designed to allow only one manufacturer's piece of equipment to be bid, usually to a sole-source vendor." Another respondent cited intentional nonadherence to specs once the bidding process was underway: "Specifications are purposefully relaxed to accept an inferior product (low bid) or a product that was not on the approved list prior to bid opening.

Each of the prior art taken alone or in combination failed to teach or suggest the above features recited in independent claims 1, 28 and 55.
